Fire occurs near St. Thom's church

The BG News

A fire broke out Saturday evening in the building behind St. Thomas More University Parish.

According to Bowling Green Police officer Chris Kennedy, the church itself was not damaged. Kennedy said that it appeared that one of the rooms behind the church on the west side of the complex was completely gutted. No injuries were reported, Kennedy said.

Smoke continued to sift out through the roof after the fire was extinguished. Bowling Green firefighters were advised to wear oxygen masks as they went inside the building.

The fire did not affect Sunday services.

Bowling Green Fire Division is still investigating the incident.

Floods in southern Ohio kill two people

The Associated Press

At least two people are dead and 11 missing after storms dumped up to 10 inches of rain on southern Ohio this weekend.

The body of a 16-year-old boy was found late Saturday in Adams County near the confluence of Blue Creek and Churn Creek, about eight miles north of the Ohio River town of Rome. Officials did not release the boy's identity.

Another body was found in Adams County Sunday morning, but Paul Howlett, director of the Adams County Emergency Management Agency, would provide no details.

Howlett said at least eight people were missing after the Great Brush Creek left its banks and swept away their cars. He said authorities are using helicopters, hovercrafts, boats and dogs to search for victims.

"We're still looking for people whose vehicles were stopped in flood waters," he said. "At least one washed downstream. Some of them are teen-agers. I guess

Craig Baker: guilty

Fostoria man could spend life in prison

By JACK BUEHRER and SARAH BEDNARSKI
The BG News

The accused murderer of University student Julie Kane was found guilty on Friday after nearly 10 hours of deliberating by the presiding three-judge panel.

Craig M. Baker, 19, faced charges of aggravated murder, aggravated burglary, and felonious assault, but was convicted on the lesser charges of murder and burglary. Defense attorney Adrian Cimerman had conceded the charge of felonious assault earlier in the week.

Baker was charged with stabbing Kane to death and wounding her roommate, Tara Fahringer, after breaking into their 911 Mourning Dove Lane home on Sept. 7, 1996.

The panel — judges Gale Williamson of Wood County, Judith Lanzinger of Lucas County and Joseph Schmenk of Defiance County — was unable to reach a unanimous decision as to the aggravated nature of the murder and burglary. Baker could receive 15 years to life in prison for the murder charge, 3-8 years for the felonious assault, and 6-18 months for the burglary.

Baker could have been sentenced to death had he been convicted of the greater charge of aggravated murder, but instead faces only up to 24 1/2 years to life in prison.

Wood County Prosecutor Alan Mayberry was seeking the death penalty, but seemed upbeat after the verdict was announced.

"I was gratified that one or two of the judges agreed with us," he said. "Everyone did everything they could. I wouldn't change a thing about how we presented our case."

Scott Hicks, co-counsel for the defense, said he was satisfied with the verdict.

"I think it was a fair verdict based on our arguments," he said.

During the reading of the verdict, the families sat nervously in the crowded gallery, while Baker kept his hand over his eyes without looking up. After the court adjourned, the Kanes and the Fahringers gathered together embracing,

Craig Baker is handcuffed after hearing his guilty ruling at the Wood County Courthouse Friday. Baker was found guilty of the stabbing death of University student Julie Kane on Sept. 7, 1996, and will spend at least 18 years in prison. Sentencing for Baker has been set for Thursday at 3 p.m.

Kane, Fahringer families relieved trial is over

Friday was an emotional day in Judge Gale Williamson's courtroom as the verdict for Craig M. Baker, accused of murdering University student Julie Kane and assaulting Kane's roommate Tara Fahringer, was read.

As Williamson read the verdict, the Kane, Fahringer and Baker families sat motionless while Baker sat sobbing next to his attorneys Adrian Cimerman and Scott Hicks.

Charged with aggravated murder, aggravated burglary and felonious assault, the three-judge panel convicted Baker of the lesser charges of murder and burglary, while maintaining the charge of felonious assault.

Roberta Kane, the victim's mother, wasn't satisfied with the verdict and believed Baker did intend to murder her daughter.

"I felt that it was intent but the judges interpreted the law differently," Kane said.

As the families proceeded out of the courtroom, the Kane and Fahringer families embraced each other in support. The Baker family, visibly shaken, conversed with Cimerman.

Aaron Kane, the victim's brother, was also upset over the verdict.

"I wanted to hear the death penalty today," Aaron Kane said. "She was the best sister, and he wasted her life."

Fahringer not only lost her roommate on the night of Sept. 7 but also her best friend.

"It's hard. She was my best friend,"

Fahringer said. "It's doesn't seem like he got what he deserved."

Fahringer said that she is moving on with her life, which means continuing with school while trying to work through what happened.

As they walked out of the courtroom, an emotional Connie and Carl Baker said they will continue to support their son.

'One year of spirit'

First anniversary of campus pride proves to be successful event

By DARLA WARNOCK
The BG News

Freddie and Frieda Falcon each gave it two thumbs up.

And the BGSU Spirit Crew was happy to have the opportunity to crowd the stage with University President Sidney Ribeau.

It's all about building community, they say.

The first anniversary of spirit day was held Friday in order to promote pride and spirit at the University.

The last day of each month, the University hosts a spirit day in which free coffee and doughnuts are offered to the campus community. Beginning in February 1996, focus groups developed the idea in order to build community.

The idea of celebrating spirit day, according to Ribeau, came from the community itself.

"Spirit day is a creation of the staff of BGSU — where people came together to promote spirit," Ribeau said. "This is something that the administration fully supports, but it was not our idea."

He said he was glad to see the community getting together to promote more spirit among the University.

"It's a wonderful activity that really emerged from the community itself," Ribeau said. "It's nice to get people together informally."

Dave Crooks, director of the University Union, said about 300 or 400 people attended the event, as compared to last year's 600. He said he felt the operations went smoother this year, and that it was a better overall example of the community.

Living with a standardized culture

One of the biggest lies of the free market is that "people get what they want."

There are two assumptions behind this belief.

The first is that people are not only aware of all of their choices and are also able to somehow "look within themselves" and find the answer to the question, "What do I want?"

The second assumption is that people are actually able to buy what they want.

The latter assumption alone is worthy of about a half-dozen opinion columns. Today, however, I'd like to concentrate on the first assumption and how it threatens American culture.

Tastes (in other words, "what people want") are determined in large part by outside factors. In fact, some psychologists would argue that taste is entirely determined by outside influences.

Think about that the next time you feel you "really want" something.

On the surface, the social construction of taste doesn't seem to be a very big problem. After all, outside influence can work for good as well as bad, just as one's own psychological processes can be considered healthy or not.

The problem is a matter of context. To illustrate this, let me tell a historical story:

Early humans quickly discovered the benefits of travelling and living in groups for protection and the gathering of food. Against the forces of nature and the local woolly mammoth, people had only their brains to protect them.

Blessed with evolutionary luck, humans overcame natural threats to their existence and discovered agriculture, a development that led to cities. With cities came a certain amount of leisure time, the seed of what we call "culture."

Languages, music, and art began to develop. Given the size of the globe and the relative isolation and dispersion of the cities on it, thousands of different cultures sprang up and flourished, starting, as far as we can tell, about six thousand years ago.

This diversity of culture remained intact for thousands of years, even through the Enlightenment and the Age of Exploration.

Then came the Industrial Revolution and the theory of capitalism. The two came hand in hand, and at the core of both is mass production: the quick manufacturing of many, similar things, to be distributed to a wide variety of people.

Throw in the communications revolution (first the telegraph, then the telephone, then computers and the Internet), and several things developed.

First, many people had a standard of living that was higher than any ever before seen in human history.

But also, and more importantly to this discussion, the walls between cultures began to break down.

For the first time in history, one could, through mass-produced books, movies, and records, know a great deal about a culture without actually having experienced this. This condition is so pervasive that it seems trivial to us today.

Consider what comes to mind when you hear about "Southern culture" or "Seattle sound" or "Greenwich Village." We know a great deal about these things even without experiencing them first hand.

Here's where the connection between wants and the breakdown of cultural walls comes in. Not only do mass-produced mass media outlets shape our view of the world, but also our like or dislike of that world.

Thus our desire to buy the latest Soundgarden record arises from the same forces as our stereotypical perception of Southerners as rednecks.

But who has control of our perceptions and ideas about the world around us? In the early isolated cities, the neighborhoods and local areas shaped human cultural preferences.

In present-day America, those communities have largely lost (or given up) control. The simple fact is that entertainment (read: culture) is an industry, and control of American culture has shifted from localities to the metaphorical Madison Avenue.

This is more than mere conspiracy theory. The concentration of entertainment industries is well-documented and visible every day, from the latest copycat bands to mega-mergers between entertainment giants (ABC and Disney, along with CBS and Westinghouse, immediately come to mind).

Drive for profit results in less-wanted cultural items (regardless of quality) being sacrificed at the altar of capitalism. Cutbacks in public television and radio are a good example of this in government.

With regards to large corporations, you need only to look at this year's Oscar nominees for best picture to see the gulf between "quality" and "what people want." Four of the five nominees were produced independently (well, not exactly, but again, that's another column), and were not blockbusters. In the game of capitalism, these films were basically losers, or at the very least, only mild winners. And yet the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences decided that films few people "wanted" were the best films of 1996--quite puzzling to an economist or a conservative, yet very logical in the eyes of an artist.

Unfortunately, it is major news when something like the preceding occurs. What is popular wins out most of the time. Basically what this means is there is a movement toward a standard American culture: bland, derivative, violence-loving, scared of sex, rated R and on sale now at Wal-Mart.

Along with this standard comes subjugation of local culture. To take just one example, record executives could care less about what is happening in the places where they sell their records--unless, of course, what is happening can be co-opted and sold to everyone else.

This leads to an interesting cultural paradox--the average person is more familiar with the faraway world than the world he or she lives in every day. We have, through new technology, expanded our circle of consciousness; in the process, however, we have lost sight of the things closest to us.

To understand the implications of this, imagine a tree growing hundreds of feet in the air, yet having no roots. Obviously, the tree (our cultural selves) has little chance of surviving.

What kind of cultural lives do we hope to have if we have little connection to our own hometowns? Trying to find common links with other people is tough enough without having to route such things through marketed culture thousands of miles away.

So support local culture, all the way from the BGSU art show to local bands to the dozens of plays, performances and lectures that occur each semester. It's about time to fight back, and to make sure that our trees have roots.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Ignorance still plagues society

This letter is addressing the letter written by Penda L. Horton in the Feb. 18 issue of The News. That letter discussed an article written by a young man that shaves his head and has been asked on occasion if he is a skinhead.

Ms. Horton wrote, "He does not have to live with hypothetical questions like that every day..." My question is, how exactly does Ms. Horton know this? There are many people in this world that judge by hair. One of my female friends has a short haircut and it is often assumed that she is a lesbian simply because she has short hair. Also, simply because he only gave one example of this assumption about his personality does not mean it was the first or only time.

A second point made was that blacks are often accused of stealing and are followed around in stores. I have experienced that the same stereotypical thoughts are directed towards skinheads.

Another statement was, "It's okay for him to be a skinhead, but in this society it's NOT okay to be black." I know of many people that think this statement is backwards. People chose to be hateful, racist skinheads, but nobody can choose the pigment of their skin.

Penda also states, "He has nothing to be mad at!" I would be upset if I cut my hair and people assumed I was a hateful, racist bigot! People come to the conclusion that because he has a shaved head, he is one of a long line of people who have suppressed and hated blacks for hundreds of years. If that is nothing to get mad at, what is?

There is, however, one point that I agreed with Penda on. "...ignorance continues to plague our society like cancer. If [we] would take the time to educate and be educated, as we all should, these frivolous questions could be used as an opportunity to enlighten the minds of individuals in darkness."

Penda's race has been through harder times than that of the young man who shaved his head and was assumed to be a skinhead, but that still gives no one the right to declare that either of them is not struggling to get by in this crazy world.

Presidents Day was a success

Dear BGSU community:

Thank you for making BGSU's Presidents Day Open House a success. Over 1,300 students and their families visited the campus. The students' evaluations we received contained positive and helpful responses such as:

- the day was well-organized
 - many smiling, helpful people
 - many classes to sit in on
 - enjoyed talking with faculty
 - I did not have enough time to do everything
 - check-in was slow but the staff was friendly
 - needed more time to do everything
 - friendly people
- Over 730 seniors, 500 juniors, and 100 transfers and sophomores attended. The key now is to convert the seniors and transfers to enrolled students and the juniors to applicants. I know that many areas of campus, including Admissions, will be following up with these students.

The program was a success because of your effort, along with the hard work of over 700 faculty, staff and students. The families I talked with were very impressed with the fact that everyone on campus was involved.

On March 5, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. in the Assembly Room (McFall Center), there will be a Presidents Day debriefing. Admissions will give a brief report on Presidents Day, but most importantly, we want the community to have the opportunity to share their thoughts and ideas.

Our goal is to make Presidents Day 1998 our best on-campus visitation day to date. Feel free to come and share your thoughts. If you cannot make the meeting, feel free to send me your comments and suggestions (mwalsh@bgnet.bgsu.edu).

Again, thanks for your assistance.

Administrators' roles explained

Speaker discusses BGSU as premier learning institution

By MELISSA NAYMIK
The BG News

Administrators hold a great deal of responsibility when it comes to making the University become the premier learning institution in Ohio, according to Stephen Brookfield.

The distinguished professor at the University of St. Thomas, St. Paul, Minn., presented the annual Gerald Saddleire Lecture Friday. The focus of the event was "Becoming a Premier Institution in Ohio: Looking at BGSU through the Lens of Learning."

Brookfield explained that there are two main levels to every institution. The first one is broad organization and the second one is individualism, or the way each person works to enhance the institution.

He said administrators have key roles in the development of the University, such as being mentors for students and bridging the gaps between different and common interests.

Administrators must also be promoters of conversation, according to Brookfield, because oftentimes students feel they cannot interact with their professors on certain levels.

Brookfield stressed the point that more one-on-one contact should be made between the student and administrator.

"A good educator sees the student's viewpoints and puts them to use," Brookfield said.

Brookfield said it is very difficult to establish institutions because there are certain cultural diversity barriers to break through.

The first barrier is silence, which occurs on campus everyday. He explained that this is not the silence of not speaking to someone, but the silence of professionals not engaging in conversations outside of the classroom.

Brookfield said faculty do not have feedback from students on how their class is being conducted, and they need some. Another problem he pointed out with silence is the lack of time. He said people are often "too busy" to speak to one another on a day-to-day basis.

The second barrier Brookfield identified is cultural individualism. "Team teaching," as he referred to it, is a soft option and is too time-consuming when it comes to teaching -- teaching on an individual level is much easier.

He said the last barrier is cultural secrecy, which means that professionals should publicly display their faults to overcome it. Many times administrators hide their mistakes because their credibility is questioned, Brookfield said.

In order to break the barriers, he said administrators need to change the reward system and focus on modeling people in power.

"Before reaching the students, administrators must first model themselves," Brookfield said. "Administrators must model how students learn first."

Administrators need to focus on the students' needs as well as their needs in order to secure and maintain status of the University and to continue campus community life, he said.

The Gerald Saddleire lecture is an annual division of Student Affairs held in memory and honor of Saddleire.

Edward Whipple, vice president of student affairs, said the late Gerald Saddleire achieved a great deal for the University.

According to Whipple, Saddleire's biggest contribution to the University was the huge impact he made on many students who have graduated from the University.

"Teaching and learning are the implications for the entire campus community," Whipple said.

"Over the year we learned how to handle this," Crooks said. "[Friday] was much more representative of spirit day. It gave people a chance to sit and talk and visit. I think that's what really happens."

He explained that anytime the University extends a hand to reach out to the students and faculty, people are more likely to respond.

"It gives you that sense of community," Crooks said. "It makes you feel better about the University."

Lois Silvieus from the President's Office directed the event. She said she was pleased with the turnout and the success of the anniversary event.

"I think it went really well," Silvieus said. "It's great that this many people will come out."

Ribeau awarded a plaque to the people who made spirit day possible, including Silvieus, Crooks, Leigh Flora Thompson, Brian Meyers and Diane Whitmire.

Door prizes including University insignia were also presented.

The Bakers said they feel for the Kane and Fahringer families.

Roberta Kane said she and her family will continue living their lives despite their painful loss.

"We are trying to go day by day," she said. "We're moving step by step, like we've been doing. Julie's in a better place now, watching over us."

"It would have given us more closure if he would have gotten the verdict he deserved," said Kane's mother, Roberta, while fighting back tears. "I could have accepted life in prison, but not this. One of these days he will get his."

Baker's stepmother, Connie, did not deny her son's guilt, but was bitter that he was the only one singled out as being involved.

"We agree with [the attorneys] on Craig's involvement," she said. "But we do think there's other things to look into."

Connie Baker wanted Craig Matthews, the host of the party attended by Craig Baker the night of the murder, to face charges for providing Baker -- a minor -- with alcohol.

"There's no sense in having the law if it's not going to be enforced," Connie Baker said. "It's like putting a gun in a baby's hand."

Baker will be sentenced by Judge Williamson in a hearing on Thursday afternoon.

STATE

Closing of Central State debated

Reports of fraud, financial problems damage university

The Associated Press

WILBERFORCE -- Reports of fraud and damaging sanctions against Central State University's athletics program have bolstered debate over whether to close the school.

State legislators, for the first time, are discussing the mechanism of closing Ohio's only historically black public university. Plans, though preliminary, deal with how to serve the state's black students.

"The vast majority of black Ohioans in higher education are not at Central State. They voted themselves to go to integrated institutions. It (CSU) has self-destructed," state Sen. Gene Watts, R-Galloway, said in a story published Sunday in the Dayton Daily News.

State officials estimate the school's debt as up to $20 million. Legislators must decide whether to continue to fund the school beyond July 1 and whether to approve a $10.3 million package to pay off debts to vendors.

Last week, the university suffered three blows:

■ Inspector General Richard Ward released a preliminary report that suggested CSU officials had engaged in "numerous instances of fraud, waste and abuse" that could result in criminal prosecution. Ward concluded that the school's culture of ignoring or defying oversight is so deeply embedded that a virtual state takeover was necessary.

■ The NAIA charged that CSU's football program knowingly allowed ineligible football players to compete in games and punished the entire athletic department by banning all teams from participating in postseason play.

■ State Budget Director R. Gregory Browning revealed that CSU will need millions more in state dollars to repair buildings.

Frederick Ransier, chairman of the board of trustees, acknowledged that the developments provide ammunition to legislators.

Quadriplegic chooses marijuana

Patient defends use of illegal drug to ease suffering

The Associated Press

OREGON -- Pain or prison. Dan Asbury, a quadriplegic, had that choice nearly a year ago. He didn't choose pain.

The choice was simple for the bor. They found 12 plants growing in his garden.

Asbury was convicted last March of one count of trafficking in marijuana.

Then came the choice.

Lucas County Common Pleas Judge Ruth Ann Franks suspended a two-year prison term and put Asbury on probation for that length of time -- on the condition he stop smoking marijuana.

Asbury said he has lied to his probation officer about quitting. He said he quit only for one week.

His probation officer, Laura Stamos, declined to comment. The judge, through her secretary, also said she had no comment.

At the time, the judge said it was clear that Asbury was using marijuana as medicine. But she also warned him that the court did not condone the use of marijuana and that he could go to prison if he violated probation.

So why is Asbury speaking out?

He said he is angry that state lawmakers are trying to repeal a law that allows people to defend their possession of marijuana for medical use if they have a doctor's recommendation. The provision was part of a 1,000-page overhaul of Ohio's criminal sentencing system last year.

More than 20 states have similar laws.

Several books propose rules to '90s dating

Authors provide conflicting advice for lonely singles

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- When Lance Contrucci and his wife were separated in August, she gave him a copy of "The Complete Idiot's Guide to Dating." She knew he would find the dating scene confusing after seven years of marriage.

But the 40-year-old writer exchanged the book for a novel and set out to explore and enjoy New York City's singles world. He was in for a shock.

"They were all the same. They all looked like they're from the cast of 'Friends,'" said Contrucci, recalling the 10 women he dated before meeting his current girlfriend. "They'd automatically have a knee-jerk response to laugh at one of my jokes or be complimentary or demure."

"It was obvious they'd been reading those silly books on dating," he added. "There's no place for romance and fun any more. It's almost like the business world has infiltrated the personal world."

These days, going out on a date is like taking an exam: Memorize the rules -- Which ear is appropriate for whispered sweet nothings? -- or flunk.

That's the message of largely self-appointed experts on love who dispense advice in books, videos and television and radio shows on how to flirt, overcome shyness and ask for a date and tips on dealing with jealousy, commitment-shy men and unrequited love.

"It's like anything else in life. If you want to do it right, there are just certain rules one follows," insisted Ellen Fein, co-author of "The Rules," which has been 20 weeks on The New York Times best sellers list.

Judy Kuriansky, author of "The Complete Idiot's Guide to Dating," now in its fourth printing, compares dating to riding a bicycle, exercising or being in a play. "You have to exercise your dating muscles," she said. "At first the exercises and the techniques may feel like they're forced ..., but once you have your lines down you can be a little more natural."

What about spontaneity? "It can come after you close the deal at stake," Kuriansky said.

Psychoanalysts say people buy the books because parents rarely

The dating books are not the answer, said Samuel Brown, a psychoanalyst in Atlanta.

"They're trying to give us some mechanistic rules for behavior when the real issue is how do you feel about yourself and what do you feel comfortable with," she said. "If you play by the rules of the book, there's no true connection."

The by-the-book quest to capture Mr. or Ms. Right can be daunting: "1001 Ways to Be Romantic" has more than 1,000 romantic tips. Confusing: Kuriansky swears by eye contact; Fein urges restraint.

And often too calculating and silly:

"When your hair falls in front of your face, you tilt your head back and comb back your hair with your hand from the top of your head in a slow, sweeping motion," "The Rules" says.

Kuriansky's book even has a detachable "refresher card" to keep in your wallet for emergencies, say, a resounding "no" from the potential lover.

Fein said using the rules -- which forbid a woman from calling a man, talking to him first or seeing him more than twice a week, and which tell her to be soft, mysterious and upbeat, even when she doesn't feel it -- is not deceptive.

Falcons claim MAC title

BG ends 14 years of frustration in 99-70 winBy JIM TOCCO
The BG NewsMEN'S
BASKETBALL

Everyone knows the Falcons are a last-minute team.

So it's not surprising that they waited until the very last day to win the regular season conference championship.

With a convincing 99-70 victory over the last-place Central Michigan Chippewas Saturday afternoon, BG earned a share of the title. With a toss of the coin just hours later, the Falcons earned the top seed in this week's Mid-American Conference Tournament.

Entering the day, three teams — BG, Ohio, and Miami — were tied atop the MAC. OU dropped an 82-73 decision to Western Michigan, but Miami kept pace with a 66-52 victory in Akron.

Just after 6 p.m., MAC commissioner Jerry Ippoliti tossed a coin to decide whether the Falcons or Redskins would earn the top seed. That coin landed in the Falcons' favor. That means they will host Toledo in the first round of the MAC Tournament Tuesday evening.

For coach Jim Larranaga and the rest of the Falcons, it was the realization of a long-held dream.

"Every day when the players leave the locker room, they are asked to tap — just as a reminder — a photo of the championship ring that was given to the men's basketball team in 1983," he said. "Every player and every coach, everyday — as a reminder."

NBA-bound Antonio Daniels started the game off in grand fashion — with a 3-pointer on his first trip down the floor, then a steal and a showtime jam. Daniels led the way for the Falcons with 32 points, eight assists and four steals. He also equalled a career high with three treys.

By the time four minutes had elapsed, BG already held a 14-4 lead. The Falcons did not trail the entire game.

Over 4,000 fans watched as BG pushed the first-half lead to 25 at one point before entering the locker room with a 48-27 lead.

"At halftime, I asked them not just to tap the picture, but to palm it — to grab at it," Larranaga said, "knowing that in 20 minutes, all of the hard work

*"But the more I see of life, the more I see it as an ongoing journey..."*Jim Larranaga could pay off with a championship ring."

BG demonstrated that work ethic in the second half, extending the lead to 31 points at one time. Everything went the Falcons' way in the second half except one thing.

Three and a half minutes into the second stanza, Anthony Stacey went to the floor, clutching his right ankle. The injury turned out to be a moderate ankle sprain. He is "very doubtful" for Tuesday's game.

Coach Larranaga was relieved and reflective after the game, putting his coaching career in perspective.

"If someone had told me when I first came here that it was going to take me 11 years before I won my first championship, I would have said, 'No way, I can't survive that.' But the more I see of life, the more I see it as an ongoing journey... and the thing I'm most proud of is the people I've surrounded myself with and the people [with whom] I've taken this journey on."

One of those people is his son, Jay, who added 19 points for the Falcons. Senior center Koen Rouwhorst chipped in a career-high 12.

The Central attack was led by Charles Macon, who managed 24 points, and Bill Slack who added 21, with five 3-pointers.

BG committed just eight turnovers, a season low. And from the first second to the last, they never stopped running.

"They played inspired basketball, as we knew they would," CMU head coach Leonard Drake said.

Seniors not finished yet

There are two ways to look at the careers of Bowling Green seniors Antonio Daniels and Jay Larranaga after Saturday's regular season finale against Central Michigan:

Either the dazzling is almost over, or the dazzling is just getting started.

The Falcons would like to believe the latter. By virtue of its breezy 99-70 win over the Chippewas, BG has earned the Mid-American Conference title for the first time in 14 seasons.

And, with the No. 1 seed in the MAC Tournament that starts Tuesday with a quarterfinal round game against Toledo at Anderson Arena, the Falcon seniors are determined to get the three more victories that will send them to the promised land of the NCAA Tournament.

"This is what we worked so hard for," said Daniels, drenched in (non-alcoholic) champagne after scoring 32 points with eight assists in the victory.

"But our team really understands that this isn't the end of it. We have goals that we set in the beginning of the season, and this is just one step as far as getting to our further goals."

Two incredible careers are nearing a close in Daniels' and Larranaga's. The two were honored in pregame festivities Saturday along with Koen Rouwhorst, the team's other senior, and manager Jamie Kachmarik.

The crowd of 4,084 shook the Anderson Arena rafters with thunderous applause when Daniels and Larranaga were presented with framed jerseys.

The two senior guards, ranked fourth and 19th, respectively, on the BG career scoring list, could have taken the opportunity to wax poetic about the past four years, but instead stayed focused on the coming week.

Falcon flames put out by Central

Chippewas roll past BG with tight defense

By JASON McMAHON
The BG NewsWOMEN'S
BASKETBALL

MT. PLEASANT, Mich. — The Falcons thought they were on fire. But Bowling Green found itself a little campfire compared to Central Michigan's blazing inferno.

The Chippewas drowned the visiting Falcons Saturday with a suffocating defense that held Bowling Green to 33 percent shooting in a 73-55 Central win.

Despite the loss, the Falcons will still host a Mid-American Conference Tournament quarterfinal game Tuesday night at Anderson Arena. The Falcons (14-12, 11-7 MAC), as the fourth seed, will host a Ball State team that was slaughtered by Toledo last night.

The Chippewas (11-15, 7-11) dominated the whole game. Through the first 11 minutes, Bowling Green could only muster eight points, while Central had rattled off 19. In that time, the Falcons were blocked three times and turned the ball over on six other possessions.

"Our defense today was awfully good," Central coach Fran Voll said. "I think we were really able to keep BG from getting into any type of flow."

Meanwhile, Central's Tracy Renken was in a flow. The 6-foot forward, who quite possibly has been the MAC's best player over the second half of the season, turned the game's first half into a personal highlight show.

Renken drilled a 3-pointer to open up the scoring and hit an assortment of baseline, pull-up and turn-around jumpers to lead the Chippewa surge. By the time the senior exited with her third foul with two minutes left in the half, she had scored 11 points and turned away two Falcon shots.

Central carried a 33-21 lead into halftime. The Chippewas were shooting at a 56 percent clip, Bowling Green shot a measly 8-of-25.

The Falcon inside game was nonexistent. Two put-backs off Sara Puthoff misses from Charlotta Jones and Sherry Kahle were the only conversions Bowling Green got from under the basket. More often than not, when the ball went into the paint,

*"Anytime that they thought that they were going to step up to the table, we did a very good job of shutting them down."*Fran Voll the Falcons either turned the ball over or were denied by the Chippewas.

"We had no inside game," Falcon coach Jaci Clark said. "We didn't have touches and no offensive rebounds. For shooting so poorly tonight, you got to get to the boards."

Bowling Green was seemingly granted a reprieve 13 seconds into the second half. Renken was whistled for her fourth personal foul, sending her back to the bench.

The Falcons took advantage, getting baskets on their next three possessions from Puthoff, who tied Jones for the team lead with 14 points, and Jacki Raterman. The six-point run cut the Chippewa lead to six at 33-27, when Voll called a timeout.

The breather fired up the Chippewas, as they came out scorching hot, compiling a deadly 15-2 run. By the time it was over, Central had a commanding 48-29 advantage.

Jones finally ended the Falcon drought by springing for the next eight Bowling Green points. But Central had an answer each time.

"We made the key shots," Voll said. "We made any shot that was needed to turn BG away. Anytime that they thought that they were going to step up to the table, we did a very good job of shutting them down."

With 6:45 remaining, Renken re-entered. With 6:02 remaining, she re-exited, having committed her fifth foul. But the Falcons could not capitalize, and they would get no closer than 14 points the rest of the way.

"Everybody else was playing pretty well for them," Clark said. "They stepped up and shot the ball extremely well. They're playing with a lot of confidence right now."

"It was a case that maybe Tracy struggled today and other people stepped up and played well. We needed that from our team."

The Chippewas had four players score in double figures. Guard Kerry Nora and backup center Ebony Rainge led the squad with 13 points apiece. Freshman Shelly Woods, another backup center, chipped in 12, and Renken added 11.

Central now owns the MAC's second-best second-half record at 7-2, behind a Toledo team that the Chippewas beat on the road. They open the MAC Tournament at second-place Kent, a team they beat last week.

Victory a sweet one for Voll

The victory was Voll's first against Bowling Green. The two-time MAC Coach of the Year was the head man for the Falcons from 1984-91, winning four consecutive MAC Tournament championships from '87-90.

In his first season at Central, Voll spoke of what it meant to get the win against his old team — and his alma mater.

"The BG game would always be a special game," he said. "I have nothing but respect for those folks. But you always want to win."

However, he emphasized the most important thing was for his

"He didn't make a whole lot of mention of it this week, but we knew that it was in the back of his head. We definitely wanted to get a win for him."

players to win, no matter who the opponent, and that he couldn't get caught up in nostalgic rivalries.

"My thing is different than theirs," Voll said. "It's important I keep my focus on them. They don't play that game through me. Players play against players."

Nevertheless, his star player said Voll's connection to Bowling Green gave the whole team added motivation.

"He didn't make a whole lot of mention of it this week," Renken said. "But we knew that it was in the back of his head. We definitely wanted to get a win for him."

Icers battle to scoreless standoff

Goalies steal show in defensive struggle

By JIM TOCCO
The BG News

They say American fans love a high-scoring game.

But if the thunderous noise from the 4,825 fans at Saturday night's first-ever scoreless tie in Falcon history is any indication, that simply isn't true.

BG played Michigan State to a flatfooted tie through 65 minutes in a night that sealed Bowling Green as the fifth-place team in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association. Ending in fifth place means that BG will travel to Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., next weekend to face Lake Superior in the first round of the CCHA playoffs.

BG goalie Bob Petrie and MSU netminder Chad Alban shined in the double-shutout.

Alban was solid, turning away 28 Falcon shots, and Petrie -- playing in his last collegiate game at the Bowling Green Ice Arena -- rejected 30.

"It's kind of ironic," Petrie said. "I started my career out with a shutout [Oct. 22, 1993, against Ohio State], and I went out with a shutout."

Petrie saved sure goals at least five times, turning away an offensive scoring machine that managed 13 goals on him in two previous games.

"Bobby played outstanding," Falcon coach Buddy Powers said. "He was under control, and I didn't think I saw him hit the panic button even once... He played a terrific hockey game."

HOCKEY

Michigan State has had two previous scoreless ties in its history, the last being Feb. 19, 1954, in a draw with Michigan. It was just the second scoreless tie in CCHA history. In the only other, Miami and Notre Dame blanked each other Dec. 10, 1994.

"This game was like old time hockey in my estimation," said Spartan coach Ron Mason, the winningest coach in college history. "It was a tough, grinding game."

"That's about as spirited as I've seen Bowling Green. It's the first game in a long time that I've seen them come out with that type of intensity."

Bowling Green did indeed play spirited hockey, playing a clean, physical game. After a tense first period that saw seven penalties assessed -- including a five-minute major and game misconduct that forced Dan Price to leave the ice -- only one penalty was dealt out in the last 25 minutes of play.

For BG, it was the second time being shut out this season. The first came on Nov. 15, 1996, against Miami. The last time BG shut out an opponent was Feb. 16, 1996. It was the first time the Falcons were shut out at the Ice Arena since Nov. 8, 1980, cracking a string of 303 games that BG got on the board.

"I'm kind of frustrated," Alban said. "You play one of your best games... you shut them out and only get a tie out of it. It's a little frustrating.

"There's nothing Petrie and I could do to win it," he continued. "We just went out and got the job done."

Western Michigan could have passed BG and secured fifth place in the CCHA with a win over Ohio State last night, but they ended up in a 3-all tie, giving BG fifth place.

If Western had won that game, it would have sent the Falcons to East Lansing to face MSU again in the tournament. Instead, BG must make the seven-hour plus journey to Michigan's upper peninsula.

Powers was indifferent to the result.

"If we have to go up there, we have to go up there," he said.

"We know they're a great team," added co-captain Mike Johnson. "But if we're focused we can beat them, just like any other team."

Nine seniors given emotional send-off

By BLAKE PARKINS
The BG News

A near-capacity crowd showed up Saturday to honor the senior hockey players in their last game at the BGSU Ice Arena, as BG duelled to a 0-0 tie with Michigan State.

The original class of Dale Crombeen, Matt Eldred, Jeff Elvin, Curtis Fry, Mike Johnson, Todd Kelman, Kelly Perrault, Bob Petrie and Brett Punched was recognized for their career achievements prior to the start of the game.

Elvin, who was greeted with an outburst of applause, had his collegiate career ended prematurely by a car accident.

The Apple Valley, Minn. native was coming to BG to begin classes for his sophomore year when he was involved in a wreck that totaled his Jeep. Elvin sustained multiple internal injuries that prevent him from playing competitive hockey.

His rehabilitation in the months that followed served as an inspiration to the team. Elvin still actively works out with the Falcons and skates in informal games.

Another Falcon that walked to center ice to be recognized was Curtis Fry, who is recovering from a knee injury sustained last weekend at Ohio State. Fry has been a consistent scorer for BG all year, as has fellow captain Mike Johnson. The duo currently share a team lead for points with 55 apiece.

"[The seniors] are good hockey players," Falcon skipper Buddy Powers said of the talented core of veterans. "Mike Johnson and Curtis Fry had the best year of their career."

Eldred, a defenseman who has improved his plus-minus rating to plus eight, said that he was moved by the boisterous fans at the Ice House.

"I almost cried," Eldred said candidly. "We got great crowd support. I'm going to miss this place a heck of a lot."

Fellow blue liner Kelman said the seniors played well in their send-off performance. Kelman himself broke up many MSU scoring chances down the stretch.

"We all played hard, the seniors played well... it's the kind of game that you want to see to give the fans something to come back to next year," Kelman said. "If we're not going to win, it's a next to perfect game."

Kelman was also shaken by the emotional experience.

"I haven't had butterflies like that since my first game against Toronto," Kelman said. "It was pretty emotional knowing that it's your last game. It's hard coming off the ice for the last time."

Punched, whose season was 12 games shorter this campaign due to a broken ankle, said that his time here at BG has gone by too fast. "I knew this day was going to come, but I didn't think it would come this fast," Punched said. "It's been a good four years, but now it's time to move on."

Swimmers claim fifth at MAC meet

By MIKE LEONARD
The BG News

The Bowling Green women's swim team finished fifth out of six teams at the Mid-American Conference Championship meet in Ypsilanti, Mich. this weekend.

Bowling Green accumulated 388 points at the meet, 19 points behind fourth-place Toledo. As expected, Miami University ran away with the meet. The Redskin women earned 833 points over the weekend, more than 100 points better than second-place Ohio University.

The weekend was not without success for the Falcons. Head coach Randy Julian was voted as Mid-American Conference Coach of the Year.

In the pool, the Falcons' biggest success came from freshmen Nancy Simpson and Bethany Budde. Simpson placed third in the 100-yard butterfly with a time of 57.50 seconds.

Simpson's biggest success came in the 200-yard backstroke in which she finished second -- BG's highest place -- and broke Jody Reed's record in that event with a time of 2 minutes 3.04 seconds.

Simpson also broke Reed's 100-yard backstroke record in the preliminary race with a time of 56.99 seconds but faltered and finished sixth in the event finals. Freshman Sarah Abell finished seventh in the same event.

Budde managed three top-five finishes. Budde finished fourth in the 200-yard individual medley, fourth in the 200-yard breaststroke, and third in the 100-yard breaststroke. Budde was satisfied with her performances this weekend but was ecstatic when she heard that Julian was voted Coach of the Year.

"I was happy with my places," Budde said. "I almost cried when I heard that [Julian] got [Coach of the Year]. It was the icing on the cake for our season."

BG's outgoing seniors also managed to put forth a good effort in their final meet. Captain Leanne Shelly managed three top-10 finishes earning sixth in the 200-yard individual medley, eighth in the 200-yard backstroke, and fifth in the 400-yard individual medley. Junior Julie Hrusovsky placed seventh in the 200-yard backstroke.

Senior diver Traci Sanderson had a good meet as well. Sanderson placed 16th in the one-meter diving competition but placed third in the three-meter diving event. Sanderson's three-meter score of 446.15 points was good enough to automatically qualify her to dive at the NCAA Zone Meet in Minnesota, the precursor to the NCAA Championship meet for diving.

The women's season is now over, but the men's team will finish their season this weekend as the MAC Men's Championship Meet will be held beginning this Thursday on the campus of Miami University.

Falcons serve up weekend wins

By RYAN JOHNSON
The BG News

The Bowling Green men's tennis team successfully defended their home court twice this weekend to get back in the win column after a four-match losing streak.

The Falcons (3-4) swept the University of Dayton, 7-0, on Friday and handily defeated Kalamazoo College, 5-2, on Saturday. The convincing victories put BG back on track as they look ahead to future matches.

"This weekend is definitely a step in the right direction," BG coach Jay Harris said. "These matches are a good preparation as we head into next Friday's match with Cincinnati."

Bowling Green's match with Dayton proved to be of little challenge to the Falcons, as BG swept every set of every flight over a shorthanded Flyers squad.

BG convincingly defeated the

TENNIS

Senior Joel Terman played at No. 1 singles for the first time this season for co-captain Adam Tropp, who sat out the match. Terman defeated UD's Steve Thompson 6-1, 6-0.

At No. 2 and No. 3 singles, sophomores Radu Bartan and Matt Wiles each won two set matches. Bartan defeated Jeff Keckley 6-0, 6-2, while Wiles beat Dan Altineau 6-1, 6-3.

Junior Ryan Gabel was victorious at No. 4 singles against Andrew Shipp, 6-4, 6-1. In the last two singles flights, a pair of Falcons picked up their first singles victories of the season. Freshman Sonny Huynh won 6-3, 6-3, against Dave Necessary and junior Scott Yonker shut out Bill Karban at No. 6 singles 6-0, 6-0.

BG convincingly defeated the Flyers in all three doubles matches. Tropp-Gabel won at No. 1 doubles 8-4, Wiles-Yonker teamed up at No. 2 to win 8-5, while Bartan-Huynh cruised in the last flight, 8-2.

"The Dayton match was a good match to help turn around our season," Gabel said. "We came out this weekend pretty fired up to prove to ourselves that we are a good team."

Kalamazoo College came into Saturday's match with the Falcons as the top-ranked Division III team in the nation. The Hornets were overmatched by BG's depth and experience, as four Falcon netters won in straight sets on their way to a 5-2 victory. Bowling Green also won two of three doubles flights for the final point.

At No. 1 singles, Tropp was defeated by the top player in Division III, Kalamazoo's Adam Norlander, 6-3, 6-4. Tropp appeared to be the better player but fell victim to some tough breaks. At the No. 2 flight, Terman continued his weekend's success by defeating KC's Zach Tann 6-2, 6-2.

Bartan and Gabel were victorious in the middle singles flights, winning 6-2, 6-0 and 6-3, 6-4, respectively. Huynh was defeated at No. 5 singles by Dan Harding, 6-3, 6-4, while Wiles picked up his second win of the weekend in the last flight 6-3, 6-2.

The Tropp-Gabel and Bartan-Yonker tandems won doubles matches against Kalamazoo while Dave Anderton and Wiles were defeated in a close match, 8-5.

The Falcons return to action this Saturday when they travel to Cincinnati to take on the Bearcats at 7 p.m.

Gymnasts fall to Cardinals, judges

By WILLIAM SANDERSON
The BG News

One of the most difficult things about a sport like gymnastics is its dependence on judges for the end result. Consistency in judging does not always occur, and Bowling Green's loss to Ball State was a case in point.

The Falcons remain winless in the MAC, falling short 188.450-186.400 in Muncie, Ind. Bowling Green's overall record stands at 1-4, with all four of their losses coming against conference opponents.

Despite the loss and the questionable judging, Falcon head coach Dan Connelly was optimistic about the team's effort.

GYMNASTICS

"We had 18 hits, and we lost the meet," Connelly said. "We were definitely the better team. Usually I don't get into the judges, but this meet the judging was weak. I was really happy with our performance."

"I think we were underscored by three or four points," Connelly continued. "This is just speculation on my part. When judges come right out and admit it, it is rather blatant. We had a 9.55 on a hit on bars by Lesley Malucci. Usually that would have been a 9.6 or a 9.7."

Ball State's Sarah Mikrut dominated the meet. The senior swept each individual event and won the all-around with a 39.250. As has been the case since the second meet of the year, no Falcon gymnast competed in the all-around. Three other Cardinals were in all four events.

Bowling Green's top finishes included three third-place finishes and a fourth. Jackie Haft's 9.700 was Bowling Green's highest individual score in any event. Also taking third was Malucci on the bars and Kim Pope in floor exercise with scores of 9.350 and 9.625, respectively. Sarah Grealis' 9.550 was good for a fourth-place finish on the balance beam.

"Our whole vaulting team did a good job, particularly Jackie [Haft] and Erin Klingenberg," Connelly said. "On the floor exercises, Erin and Kim Pope did a good job."

There are now two weeks remaining before the MAC Championships. Bowling Green will host their final home meet of the season this Friday against Western Michigan. Their last regular season meet will be at Central Michigan, who is hosting the MAC Championships.

Julian named MAC Coach of the Year

Falcon swim coach Randy Julian was voted Mid-American Conference women's swimming Coach of the Year this past weekend at the MAC Championship meet.

Julian, in his second year as coach of the Falcons, guided the women's swimming team to a fifth-place finish at MAC Championships this past weekend.

BGHS wins state hockey title

The Bowling Green High School hockey team won its fourth state title this past weekend. BGHS defeated Lakewood St. Edwards in the championship game by the final of 2-1 at the Brooklyn Recreation Center in Brooklyn, Ohio.

Precision skaters take second

The BGSU precision skating team placed second two weeks ago in a United States Figure Skating Association competition. It was the first time that university precision teams competed against each other in a USFSA contest.

The precision skating team will compete at the National Precision competition in Syracuse, N.Y. March 7-9.

VETERANS

"I'm not really thinking about that much right now," Larranaga said. "Right now, I just want to be [regular season] MAC champs. Now that's over, I want to win on Tuesday and win on Friday and Saturday."

Daniels, on his way to a first round selection in the NBA Draft, hit on 12 of his 16 field goal attempts against Central Michigan, including three of four 3-point attempts.

Larranaga was next on the scoring list with 19 points Saturday, including seven rebounds. The seniors were then the first two up the ladder in the post-game ceremony to cut down the net.

"This was a big game for us as seniors and for us as a team," Daniels said. "It's been one of our goals since we reported back to school. Everybody put in the hard work and the commitment needed to get the job done."

Daniels, with 1,707 career points, is within range of second-place James Darrow (1,740) on the BG scoring list. He will finish in second place on the all-time assists chart and could end up with the second-highest single season scoring total in school history.

Larranaga, the son of head coach Jim Larranaga, will finish his career as the most prolific 3-point shooter in school history. A career at the next level is also within his reach.

Those accomplishments are on the back of those two players' minds, however.

"I'm more focused on our goals: winning the MAC Tournament, getting to the NCAA Tournament," Daniels said.

At a time when the Falcons could easily have reflected, there was no nostalgia.

There was only a determination, and a feeling that this team's best - with Daniels and Larranaga leading the way - is yet to come.

Embry denies rift with Fratello

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- There has been no discussion about whether Cleveland Cavaliers coach Mike Fratello will be let out of his contract after the season, team president Wayne Embry said Saturday.

"We're in the middle of a season," Embry said after Cleveland's 99-81 victory over the Boston Celtics. "And he's got this year and another year on his contract. Period."

Embry said he was concerned about a report in Friday's New York Post that Fratello might be allowed out of the last year of his deal with the Cavs. Embry said his comments at the league's competition meeting during All-Star weekend were misinterpreted as a rift between himself and Fratello.

"I don't know how that could be construed," Embry said.

Embry said he merely made general comments on low scoring and defensive-minded coaching styles in the NBA.

"It has nothing to do with my relationship with Mike," Embry said. "Absolutely nothing to do with it."

New York Post columnist Peter Vecsey predicted in his column that Fratello would be allowed to pursue other options after this, his fourth season in Cleveland. The column named Notre Dame coach John MacLeod and Cincinnati coach Bob Huggins as possible successors.

Embry said he has talked with neither coach.

Huggins, who is friends with Embry and Fratello, said Friday, "I have so many other things to worry about right now, trying to get this team ready to play. I don't even want to think about those things."

Fratello has led the Cavaliers to the playoffs three straight seasons. Cleveland is currently in the seventh playoff spot in the
